MICHELLE KEEGAN:

COY ABOUT SURGERY CLAIMS

She's been accused of having an "Essex makeover" since she started dating Mark Wright in 2012 and looks dramatically different from her fresh-faced image in 2008. And Michelle Keegan kept people guessing over speculation about her changing face last year when she was asked whether she'd had work done and replied: "So what if I have or haven't?" before admitting she'd "never say never" to having cosmetic enhancements in the future.

But despite the 29-year-old previously saying: "Everyone says that I've changed my face and I've had Botox... you can see I haven't," celeb surgeon Mark Ho-Asjoe believes she may have since been swayed.

Mark thinks Michelle - who is a fan of wearing blue-coloured contact lenses - may have undergone procedures to transform her looks.

MARK'S VERDICT: "Michelle's nose appears to have been slimmed down and she looks like she's had filler in her lips to plump them up. She's lost a little weight, which could be the reason her face is slimmer, but the difference is so drastic I wouldn't be surprised if she's had filler in her chin to make it appear longer and more defined."

"Her forehead is still completely taut, which could be down to Botox injections, although she is still young. I think she may also have had Botox in her jawline, which can give the cheeks more definition and streamlines the whole face. Having Botox around the forehead and eye area to iron out creases and lines is completely unnecessary for anyone this young. Michelle really doesn't need to do this."
